Welcome to our European facilities

From our five sites across South Wales, Ireland and Germany, PCI’s European operations deliver a fully integrated Molecule to Market offering for our clients. Utilising leading edge technology and unparalleled expertise, PCI addresses global drug development needs at each stage of the product life cycle, for even the most challenging applications.

Bridgend

With considerable investment in specialist capability, PCI’s Bridgend location offers both extensive secondary packaging and labelling expertise coupled with unrivalled capability for supporting a considerable range of Cold Chain and Ultra Cold Chain product needs, including the expertise and infrastructure to support preparation, storage and global distribution of cell therapies and Advanced Therapeutic Medicinal Products (ATMP) with cryogenic temperature requirements down to -196ºC. The site also supports bespoke client needs with custom solutions for each developing therapy, partnering with clients to identify the optimal solution for each challenging temperature sensitive application.

Our dedicated experts are highly effective in addressing specific customer challenges, providing clients both industry leading practices and innovative solutions in support of clinical development and global trial supply. PCI’s Bridgend team supports clients with an expert staff of highly skilled associates and extensive industry experience, versed in the needs of today’s clinical trial market.

Hay-On-Wye

With extensive capability for both clinical and commercial packaging and labelling activities, the Hay-on-Wye site offers clients a robust solution for primary and secondary packaging of a variety of drug delivery forms. PCI’s expertise and investments in leading packaging technologies create solutions for speed-to-market and efficiency in drug supply.

Scalable packaging technologies allow us to grow and evolve as project needs change through the product life cycle, from early phase clinical development and growth into large scale clinical supply, commercial launch, and ongoing global supply. PCI offers bespoke packaging solutions for challenging applications at its Hay facilities, including modified environments for light and moisture sensitive products, Cold Chain solutions for temperature sensitive products and biologics, specialist facilities for packaging of potent compounds, as well as offering one of the largest controlled drug vaults in all of Europe.

With over 30 years of experience, the dedicated team at Hay prides itself on a breadth of knowledge and specialist expertise, ensuring the best possible solutions for our clients.

Tredegar

With unparalleled capability in contained manufacture of potent compounds, our Tredegar site excels as PCI’s centre of excellence for drug manufacture. Significant investment in cutting edge technologies and world-class award-winning facility design have enabled a truly market leading service for the development and manufacture of clinical and commercial scale products. Services include formulation and analytical development, clinical trial supply, and commercial manufacturing... of solid oral dose, powders, liquids and semisolids, supported by in-house packaging and labelling services and on-site laboratory services.

With over 35 years of experience in providing integrated drug development, PCI supports compounds from the earliest stages of development through to commercial launch and ongoing supply. Recognized for our regulatory and export experience, our Tredegar site supplies global markets including Europe, the US, South America and Japan.

Stamullen

Experts in outsourced packaging operations, the PCI Stamullen site has five GMP compliant and Health Products Regulatory Authority (HPRA) approved facilities across the greater Dublin area. With advanced capabilities in the areas of blister packaging, bottling and warehousing requirements it also offers expertise in late stage customization and Cold Chain packaging services.

Stamullen's state-of-the-art high containment facility specializes in the primary and secondary packaging of all solid oral dose forms including specialized and high potent products. The facility provides current and future customers with the highest standards of excellence in outsourced pharmaceutical packaging services.

Additional services at the site include storage capabilities for clinical and commercial products and Serialization capability as well as a full analytical release testing laboratory.

The Stamullen site has been serving pharmaceutical and healthcare customers for over 20 years and its presence in the European Union makes it an important hub for PCI.

Großbeeren

With scalable capabilities in both clinical supply chain and commercial packaging and labeling, the Berlin site provides a one-stop solution for secondary packaging, storage and global distribution of a wide range of dosage forms. The site has the flexibility to handle orders of any size, from low volume custom packaging to high volume requirements. Our GMP-compliant facility has the infrastructure required to support a variety of Cold-Chain needs, including the ability to package, store and distribute globally within strict temperature-controlled requirements.

We are uniquely positioned to provide extensive clinical trial packaging, labeling, global logistics, and returns and destruction through our large network of PCI facilities. Our commercial packaging group provides full service commercial packaging, including serialization along with a wide range of secondary packaging. Our devoted team of experts are highly knowledgeable and flexible enabling us to adapt to the everchanging needs our client’s project may face.
Situated in South Wales, 18-miles (29 km) west of the capital Cardiff, Bridgend sits at a confluence of three rivers, the River Ogmore, the Llynfi River and the Garw River. Named in the 15th Century, Bridgend literally means ‘The main bridge on the River Ogmore’ after a stone bridge was built to connect (permanently) each side of the River. Originally this bridge had four arches but in the 18th century a massive flood washed two of them away. The rest of the bridge still stands and still remains a focal point of the town.

The Industrial Revolution brought prosperity and a good communication system to Bridgend. Although itself outside the rich coal seams, the mining valleys of Ogmore and Llynfi sent their coal down by small railways to meet Brunel’s main line. The present railway station incorporates part of the original building.

Just before the outbreak of the Second World War, a huge Royal Ordnance Factory was built and a massive underground armament store dug into the hill of Brackla. Subsequently this was converted into a complex nuclear bunker, but since the end of the Cold War, the communications pylon stands amongst hundreds of fast-growing broadleaf trees - a peaceful home for many species of wildlife.

During the war, German prisoners of war were confined in a camp at Island Farm, to the west of the town. In 1945 a number of prisoners escaped, some reaching the east coast of England before being recaptured. Since the war, the face of Bridgend has changed with the ever-growing industrial complex. Ford and Sony have huge factories, and are the foremost employers, attracting workers from most of the surrounding areas. Bridgend is also home to the headquarters of the South Wales Police force.

The town of Hay-On-Wye is located on the Welsh and English borders and has an approximate population of 1500 people. The town lies at the northernmost point of the Brecon Beacons National Park, standing on the southern side of the River Wye. Across the river to the north are the green hills of Radnorshire, to the south and west lies the glorious range of the Black Mountains. To the east is the Golden Valley, part of the cultivated farmlands of Herefordshire. Hay is situated in some of the most varied and beautiful countryside the British Isles has to offer.

In local terms, the town was known as ‘The Hay’, the name deriving from Norman origin, Hay or Haie, meaning a fenced or hedged enclosure. In modern times, Hay is known throughout the world as ‘The Town of Books’, and is widely considered to be the second-hand book capital of the world.

For ten days a year, 85,000 people come from all over the UK, Europe, America and the rest of the world to join a carnival celebration of ideas and stories at the Hay Festival of Literature & the Arts. Writers, politicians, poets, scientists, comedians, philosophers and musicians come together on the greenfield site to talk, eat, think, drink and be merry!
Situated at the north end of the Sirhowy Valley in South Wales, Tredegar is a vibrant town with a unique history. The town has been in existence for over 200 years and its past has been shaped by heavy industry, particularly iron and coal.

In the 1800’s, Tredegar was a beautiful area amongst forested hills with a few scattered farming homesteads. With the growth of the iron industry and the creation of the Tredegar Iron Company (TIC) in 1799, Tredegar turned into a 19th century boom town.

The owners of the TIC were responsible for the erection of many of the town’s landmarks including the town hall and the iconic town clock which has stood in ‘The Circle’ (originally Market Square) since 1858.

Many famous residents include the former leader of the British Labour party, The Right Honourable, the Lord Neil Kinnock and snooker ace, Ray Reardon. It is also proud to host a unique gold post box to honour Gold medal winning Paralympic cyclist Mark Colbourne who claimed Wales’ first gold of the 2012 London Paralympic Games.

By far the most famous person to come from the town was Aneurin Bevan. The son of a miner, Bevan was a lifelong champion of social justice, rights of working people, and socialism. In 1945 Bevan was appointed as Secretary of State for Health, with a remit that also covered housing. Bevan had responsibility for instituting a new National Health Service, paid for by a severe increase in marginal tax rates and with no fees paid at the point of delivery. He is recorded as having said of the NHS, “All I am doing is extending to the entire population of Britain the benefits we had in Tredegar for a generation or more. We are going to ‘Tredegar-ise’ you.”

Stamullen

Stamullen is a beautiful village in County Meath, Ireland on the border with County Dublin. It lies just off the M1 (J7) motorway, close to the coast and 35 km north of Dublin City, beside the River Delvin. The village and its surrounding area is rich in heritage and culture. The medieval ruins of St. Patrick’s Church within the graveyard date to the early 13th Century. The graveyard also hosts the ruins of St. Christopher’s chapel, built by the Preston family who were Viscounts of Gormanston from 1363 to 1947. The newer St. Patrick’s Church, built in 1831 and recently renovated and updated, is the central point of the village.

Life in the late 1990’s and early 2000’s brought substantial change to the village. Housing estates grew up and shops and other developments were built to support the growing population. Stamullen today is greatly changed from the sleepy village of 20 years ago!

Stamullen is home to Silverstream Priory, a Benedictine monastery of the Diocese of Meath. In March 2012, two American monks moved into Silverstream House, originally built in 1843 by the Preston family (the Viscounts Gormanston). The monastery specializes in celebrating the Liturgy in Latin, Gregorian chant, Eucharistic Adoration and the spiritual assistance of Roman Catholic clergy.
Großbeeren

Großbeeren was first mentioned in a 1271 deed. It was almost completely in the Thirty Years' War and again in 1760, when Russian and Habsburg troops in the course of the Seven Years' War burnt down the church and several houses.

On 23 August 1813 the Sixth Coalition under Crown Prince Charles John of Sweden and General Friedrich Wilhelm Freiherr von Bülow defeated three corps of the Imperial French Army under Marshal Nicolas Oudinot in their advance on Berlin at the Battle of Großbeeren. A memorial tower in the village centre was erected on the hundredth anniversary in 1913. Furthermore, a fieldstone pyramid from 1906 on a pasture west of Großbeeren is dedicated to General von Bülow.

In September 1942 the Gestapo established a labour camp in Großbeeren, where at least 1197 forced labourers from Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Poland, Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union were killed. Werner Seelenbinder was imprisoned here in 1943. Großbeeren shared its borders with the former West Berlin, and so during the period 1961-1990 it was separated from it by the Berlin Wall.

Großbeeren can be reached via the Bundesstraße 101 federal highway. It has also access to the Berlin–Halle railway. A large logistics complex serves for storage and distribution of goods addresses to Berlin.

Getting to our sites
Bridgend is a beautiful region where history tumbles out to greet you around every corner. In fact it’s like Wales in miniature. Everything in close proximity. Castles, ancient inns, mysterious mansions, rugged coast and inspiring churches, all contained within 28 miles of coastal scenery that also includes villages, towns, history and legends.
Hay-On-Wye often abbreviated to just “Hay”, is a small market town and community which lies on the Welsh side of the Welsh/English Border in the County of Powys. Often described as “the town of books”, it is the National Book Town of Wales. The annual Hay Festival is a major international literary festival.
A unique valley town that can boast its own place in history. Tredegar is the birthplace of the National Health Service, which was modelled on the Tredegar Medical Aid Society. Aneurin Bevan, the NHS’ founder, is Tredegar’s most famous son and when visiting Tredegar make sure that you take in the Bevan Trail.
Stamullen is a beautiful village in County Meath, Ireland on the border with County Dublin. The business is located off the M1 motorway (J7) on the Irish North to South corridor guaranteeing quick and efficient access to the site. The facility is located in a new commercial development just 20 minutes from Dublin airport and is positioned next to the City North Hotel which has become a landmark for travel between the north and south of Ireland.
Großbeeren is a municipality in the district of Teltow-Fläming in the German state of Brandenburg. Großbeeren and its outlying districts offer numerous leisure activities and colourful exciting natural and social and cultural landscapes. It is located about 3 km south of Berlin’s city limits and includes the localities of Diersdorf, Heinersdorf and Kleinbeeren.

Brecon Beacons

With mountains and moorland, large standing stones and castles, lively waterfalls and vibrant communities, the Brecon Beacons National Park has masses to offer residents and visitors. It has a long and colourful history and a rich and varied mythology and culture.

The National Park is around 42 miles wide. In total, it covers approximately 520 square miles of South and Mid Wales, just west of Herefordshire, and includes parts of Powys, Carmarthenshire, Monmouthshire, Rhondda and Merthyr Tydfil. It gets its name from the Central Beacons, which dominate the skyline south of Brecon. They rise to 886 metres at Pen y Fan, the highest peak in southern Britain.

The night skies are remarkable and have earned the park recognition as an International “Dark Sky Reserve”. Every March, Brecon Beacons hosts the Hay Dark Skies Festival where visitors have a unique opportunity to view the stars from the darkest skies in southern Britain.

The industrial heritage is magnificent, Blaenavon is classified as a UNESCO World Heritage Site. The rocks in the national park also tell their own story, They are so unique that part of the park has been designated a UNESCO Geopark.
